new research results, the very latest international science news, key papers by the world's leading scientists and speed of publication ensure Nature remains one of the foremost weekly scientific journals in the world.

But if you're tied in to a circulation list at work, all this vital weekly information will undoubtedly reach you late, often incomplete and sometimes not at all.

With your own personal copy, you solve the problem. Every week you'll have all the latest research results and science news in your hands within days of publication:

News reports from throughout the world of science and technology.
A News and Views section, where new ideas are analysed and discussed by leading researchers.
Articles and Letters in which key investigators disclose their work for the first time.
Book Reviews - Eminent figures offer expert judgments on a wide variety of recent publications.
Special Issues providing an in-depth treatment of topics of importance.
Product Reviews - Detailed descriptions of laboratory equipment newly available.
Classified Advertisements for a wide variety of positions all over the world.

You will no longer be dependent upon other people passing down the 'list' copy, and because you will automatically receive every issue, you won't risk missing a single copy through absence from work. Moreover, you keep all this key information for permanent reference.
