At last . . . a total reference for clinician and researcher

A Textbook of Human Virology

Edited by Robert B Belshe MD,
Chief, Section of Infectious Diseases, Marshall University School of Medicine, Huntington, West Virginia.

Drawing together the expertise of a noted group of international specialists, this unique book represents the first complete compendium of current knowledge in the field of clinical virology. It serves as a practical guide to the diagnosis of viral infections in the community setting and to the appropriate use of reference laboratories. It also deals with current therapeutics and guidelines for prevention of viral infections for the practising physician and infection control nurse.
